

PERSPECTIVES AND POSITIONS

By James Dykstal, CFA, Portfolio Manager, April 2023

This is a summary of our views on the economy and markets based on data through April 2023.

Economy

- U.S. GDP Growth We expect to see slow economic growth for the 2023. There is a risk of recession priced into the market for 2023. The inverted yield curve gives us a signal of slowing growth.
- Inflation Inflation has increased markedly but is now trending lower. However, it is still relatively high at 4.9% year-over year for April compared to the inflation rate prior to the pandemic. We believe that inflation will continue to moderate during the remainder of 2023 but remain about 1% higher than it had been prior to the pandemic.
- Employment/Wages Job creation is slowing. Tightness in the labor market is leading to higher wage growth; however, the wage growth rate is below the rate of inflation.
- Interest rates We believe the Federal Reserve will seek to pause interest rates increases in the near term. The last three increases in rates were 25 basis points apiece.

Markets

- Fixed Income Yields in the shorter end of the maturity curve decreased in the quarter as concerns about regional banks arose. The ten-year Treasury closed April at 3.45%, slightly down from the March close of 3.49%. This suggests that an economic slowdown is expected, and eventually interest rates cuts by the Fed may occur.
- Equities We expect GDP growth to remain slow and/or contract for calendar 2023. We believe that equity markets will continue to experience volatility as the market continues to digest the rapid increases of rates in 2022 and into 2023. Higher interest rates provide headwinds to valuations.
- Alternatives Private real estate, retail, office, and apartment sectors have not kept pace with torrid industrial sector, but in aggregate provided diversification to portfolios in 2022. We are now seeing valuations in real estate turn over as higher rates impact valuations of real estate properties. Hedge funds provide diversification benefits to equity/fixed income markets.
